

2.4.2 Other Principal Arterial Roadways by Focus Area

This study also considers Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) routes and major roadways within the study area. A BIA Road System consists of those roads which are important to the overall public transportation needs of the reservation as recommended by the Tribal Governing Body. BIA has the primary responsibility for maintenance and improvement of these routes. Roads included on the BIA system generally are not on a Federal-aid system. There are many routes within the Navajo Nation that qualify under this category.

Other major roadways are that were identified as regional facilities that provide interconnectivity but are not designated as either Federal or State:
